

THE OVERALL TREND OF DESTRUCTION AND HOW TO REVERSE IT

If you are concerned about the wreckage of the environment, species of birds and mammals going extinct, food sustainability, affordable housing, effective healthcare, climate change, civil rights, and the host of other issues the population of the United States of America is facing, I have the answer to all these problems. Advocate for the female's right to have her property protected from theft. This will restore the balance between "yin" and "yang" that has created a disturbance in the force.

When a critical mass of people listen to the voice of their own conscience over the voice of the Devil, these issues will be on their way to resolution. You listen to the Devil when he tells you that children being molested or sexually assaulted is something the human race has tolerated for thousands of years, it will always be that way, we can't get rid of it, it is an evil to be accepted, and it's totally unrelated to the imbalance of power that has caused giant corporations to nearly take over our democracy. You follow the Devil's orders when you agree to give in and submit to the forces of evil because the battle is already lost. You follow the Devil's advice when he tells you to leave the subject of child abuse to the "other people" to deal with, because it's a personal or family issue that has nothing to do with the other issues our population is facing. Actually, pedophilia is the root cause of all environmental destruction, animals going extinct, food un-sustainability, homelessness, lack of affordable medicine, climate change, and degradation of civil rights. Pedophilia is classified as a mental illness according to the DSM.

Contrary to popular belief, it is NOT greed and entitlement causing a small group of people to hoard the planet's resources to the detriment of the rest of the world population. The reason why pedophilia is the root cause of all the imbalances in the distribution of resources is that the small group of people who are pillaging this earth are doing it because they get off on causing damage. The technology exists for renewable sources of energy, yet people out there choose something like fracking, which puts toxins into the local water supply and causes severe environmental wreckage for their method of income; in the exact same way that the wealthy cartels of human trafficking could make a career out of doing anything, and they choose to make a career out of selling children to be sexually assaulted continuously.

People who are choosing to make profit out of non-renewable sources of energy are doing it because they get off on permanent damage to the environment; they get off on destroying the "yin." It is not laziness, it is not greed, it is not entitlement, it is not sheer stupidity; they want the damage. Some of these people were molested in their childhood and are acting out their rage because the people who molested them did not experience any consequences for their actions; and some of them are the owners of giant corporations that are poisoning our food source and dumping toxic waste into the oceans. Pointing your awareness there is extremely invasive, as other people's childhood traumas are nobody's business but their own; yet moving your attention away from the trauma of victims and onto ending the continued crime streak of the perpetrators is appropriate. Focusing your attention on the big picture of the overall trend and how to stop it is a responsible course of action when a contagious illness has impacted 25% of the population.

I want you to stop and think about this for a minute. 1 in 4 children are molested. If it happens young enough, and the trauma is extreme enough, a condition like multiple personality disorder can result. If you really think that 25% of the population can suffer an extreme trauma during the formative years of their childhood, not receive therapy, watch their perpetrator walk away scot free, and then go about their lives making conscious choices that manifest balance and harmony for the rest of the population, you might want to re-evaluate your expectations of what it means to survive child abuse, and how that impacts the rest of the population.

If you want to stop environmental destruction, if you want to prevent species of birds and mammals from going extinct, if you want to prevent all the rainforests from being cut down, if you want to end the patterns of food unsustainability, if you want to end homelessness, if you want to slow climate change, if you want to end the lack of access to medicine, if you want to stop the forces of evil from damaging this planet and the human population any further, then begin by addressing the wound in the human creative sexual power base which is where all these issues are being manifested from. If pedophilia, the disease based on enjoying permanent damage to life itself, was formally declared a physical illness and treated like the Black Plague of Death that it is, these other issues would immediately begin to resolve, because we would not have people in positions of power who get off on abusing sentient life forms going unchecked and untreated. Pedophilia should be classified as a biological weapon that must be quarantined and must not come into contact with society until the people infected with it have been successfully treated (not the victims, just the perpetrators). Currently, there are people sick with pedophilia occupying positions of power and authority shaping this country's policies, including people who are conducting research on the genetic engineering of humans.

If you want to protect the environment, then request that all the men who are sexually assaulting children be quarantined and that their victims be able to sue them for the damages. It is the exact same force of evil at work, pillaging the earth, and sexually assaulting human children. Once a man gets away with sexually assaulting multiple adolescents, such as the “customers” of human trafficking do, we have dropped the bar of our standards so low that everything else has gone to complete shit. How on earth do you expect to have any protection for the environment or for animals if we as a human species are not willing to speak openly about pedophilia in order to prioritize protecting human children from being raped?

There currently exists a technology that can be used to locate any missing person in under 10 minutes; it can be used to hunt people or animals, it can be used to locate hostages, it can be used to locate victims of an avalanche. The reason why this technology has not been required to be formally acknowledged by our government is because the population of the United States is uninformed about the horrors of commercialized child abuse in our country or programmed to think, “Not my problem, that is a crime of poverty.” No, human trafficking is not a crime of poverty, it is a crime of humanity, a Holocaust happening on women and children’s bodies that generates millions of dollars of profit for the wealthy cartels being protected from prosecution by a few corrupt government employees.

If all the United States citizens raised their voices and requested that 1) Center of Disease Control formally acknowledge pedophilia to be both a contagious disease and a biological weapon, and 2) requested accountability for our government to quarantine pedophilia with treatment centers that include reversible chemical castration, then the “consumer demand” originating from the United States that drives the illegal industry of commercialized child abuse (human trafficking) in the U.S. and worldwide could be eliminated, ISIS would lose a portion of its sponsors, and the most sick people would be locked up and prevented from causing more damage to sentient life forms.

It may seem oversimplified, but if you understand what pedophilia is really about, that is has nothing to do with sexual attraction to children and everything to do with the sexual gratification accompanying the power trip of permanent damage to life itself, then it makes sense to stop looking the other way and pretending like it is someone else's problem, stop living the "Let's not talk about it," lifestyle in which our entire culture revolves around pretending like this disease doesn't exist because it's too horrible to face. Let's talk about something else besides the most horrific force of evil ravaging the human race, let's talk about Russia, let's talk about the stock market, let's talk about the satellite taking pictures of the planet Mars, let's talk about sports, let's talk about anything except the root cause of where we lost our shit as a species. In all fairness, pedophilia is scary and traumatic and not the easiest thing to talk about. It is easier to talk about a bus full of children getting blown up and dead than it is to talk about pedophilia. And, other people are probably not as willing as I am to stick their neck out and risk saying the wrong thing that could upset someone on a highly sensitive subject. We as a community need practice talking about tough things with TLC.

It isn't easy to talk about because the whole thing is traumatic for everyone, even those who have not had any direct experience with pedophilia, just the fact that it exists at all is traumatic. But we need to face it with courage and love together as a community. If we continue to avoid the subject while commercialized sexual violence is an industry in the United States that generates millions of dollars of profit, you can expect everything else to go down the tube as well. If you pick up the bar of expectations and raise the standard of humanity from where it was dropped, asking our elected officials to address the crisis of human rights (human trafficking = hostage taking U.S. citizens within our own country by domestic terrorists), then the standard of service for all U.S. citizens will be raised.

Convicted criminals sick with pedophilia should not be released from prison without first going to a treatment center, as they are repeat offenders, and the "customers" of human trafficking (commercialized child abuse) in the U.S. and worldwide. What is most sick is that some people feel sorry for men who molest children and don't want them to be temporarily chemically castrated because they prioritize a man's pleasure over preventing more children from being raped. As long as you prioritize the pleasure of a pedophile over the safety of children, you can expect the power imbalance at the root of all our issues of environmental destruction to remain unresolved. Pedophiles get off on creating permanent damage to the child's future sex life; repeat sex offenders deserve castration, not pity. If we did not have a religion of patriarchy imposed upon us by our government, in which the pleasure of the male took precedence over the safety of women and children, then repeat sex offenders would not be allowed to go untreated.

There is a cure for pedophilia. Curing is not the same as healing. Allopathic medicine cures through drugs and surgery, and naturopathic medicine heals through a holistic approach. Considering that an estimated 25% of our population suffers the damage of being victimized by a pedophile, and considering that child abuse is illegal and a crime that people go to prison for, and considering that human trafficking is the main source of money sponsoring terrorist groups like ISIS, don't you think it's time we ask for this disease be quarantined? The majority of victims of human trafficking are girls aged 11-14 years old. The link between human trafficking sponsoring war, the war machine creating more refugees and more environmental destruction, war creating more poverty, and poverty creating more vulnerable populations at risk for being trafficked cannot be ignored.
