

THE ROAD OUT OF HELL

You may have been introduced to the archetype of a “wounded healer,” which is a rather humorous label because all humans are wounded in some way or another, and referring to a healer as wounded is like calling a bear furry. Some people who choose medicine as their career do so because they are interested in using their resources to improve the quality of other people’s lives. And some people get into medicine because they are seeking to heal themselves, and what better path for self-healing than to become an expert at medicine? I bring this up because it has come to my attention that there are many “wounded healers” in the field of mental healthcare, who have adopted the tenets of the collective ego which state that our thinking process is a superior source of intelligence to our feeling process.

I read an article in the Scientific American which stated that psychopathic traits were excellent qualities in a leader, and some of history’s most effective leaders such as Winston Churchill had the traits of a psychopath. Now, I don’t know about you, but that struck me as a little odd, like a band of psychiatrists were attempting to normalize “crazy” in order to convince the medical establishment that they themselves were normal. Do psychiatrists ever self-diagnose? Or would they arrange collected research to justify and rationalize their own imbalances as anything but a pathology?

Does anybody remember when the medical researchers assured us that after several years of scientific study, hormone replacement therapy was safe, and then 10 years later it came out that it dramatically increased the risk of cancer, to the point that many doctors withdrew their recommendation to take it? Do you think that maybe the researchers and author of that Scientific American article may have the same margin of error, when they collectively agreed that traits of insanity were desirable qualities in a leader? I am not calling into question the mental health of the President of the United States; I am calling into question the values our society upholds, such as fighting and doing things by force instead of achieving progress through diplomacy and mediation. This article stated that lack of empathy and lack of conscience are beneficial survival skills, and that is bunk science because everyone knows that human beings are social creatures that must remain in a tribe to survive; if you have lack of empathy then you are a less desirable mate, and you also are less likely to get along with members of your tribe.

Human beings are sensitive creatures, and it is our sensitivity that lends itself to our survival. You may have heard scientific facts about how sensitive animals are, such as how a shark can smell one drop of blood in the ocean from a mile away. Rarely do you hear about the gifts of sensitivity that we humans carry, and even more rarely are our gifts of feelings upheld as a reliable source of information. I would be interested to hear the results of a research study on how male human beings are affected by the presence of a female human being, such as a man sitting peacefully alone in a room, and how his blood pressure changes, his brain functions change, and his thermo-kinetic patterns of chi in his magnetic field change in response to a female of any age approaching him.

My theory is that human beings are hard wired for empathy, and that our natural inclination is to be on the same wavelength, and our inability to harmonize the chi in our respective human magnetic fields are what generate social disorders. Furthermore, my theory is that people with the mental disorder of pedophilia suffer from a severe version of a reactivity that takes place as their magnetic fields clash with those who have the qualities of what we name as “innocence” and “purity.” I do not support the idea that people with the mental disorder of pedophilia cannot get help, because at any point they could turn themselves in to a doctor or a policeman and get some support, right? What about the people with pedophilia that use self-discipline to avoid hurting anyone, and they eschew child pornography, do you think they are worth receiving the benefits of researching a cure? Because currently there are lots and lots of pedophiles in America who are receiving healthcare benefits, an IRA, and a fat pension that will continue to support their lifestyle of purchasing the opportunity to participate in commercialized child abuse (human trafficking.)

When you are in the presence of a person who respects you exactly the way that you are, you feel it. When you are in the presence of someone who wants to dominate you or fix you or shape you to be the way they want you to be, you feel it; unless of course they are working to hide that from you. Just because a person is unkind or violent does not mean they lack emotional intelligence, it is emotional health they are lacking. Ted Bundy was extremely emotionally intelligent, which is how he was able to get away with his crimes for so long.

I believe the road out of hell begins with learning about, discovering, and respecting the energetic sensitivity* of the human male. Males have more “yang” life force energy that females do, and “yang” is delicate and hollow like a paper lantern. For those Taoist theology buffs out there, you know that “yin” is dense. Human males have an extra sensitive set of whiskers in their magnetic fields, and women also have yang and energetic sensitivity as well, but men have additional “antennae” that women lack, in the same way that men have facial hair and women do not. Human females have also had their own “yang” sensitivity squashed down and crushed through social conditioning, physical and energetic violence. If people were to go about researching the presence of the Anti-Matter particles (lack of self-worth) and how they interfere with the human male and the human female being able to “line up” their magnetic fields through a consent-based platform in order to harmonize their chi in each other’s presence, we could find the solution to a whole range of social disorders, especially in the category of human sexuality.

I request that you begin respecting male sensitivity by immediately outlawing male genital mutilation (circumcision before the age of consent).
