

ALTERNATING PRESENTATIONS OF COMPETENCY IN THE WHITE HOUSE

You may not think that you have much power to make a significant difference in the direction of national politics in the USA, but voting in a democratic election is an expression of power often taken for granted and underestimated by the citizens of this country.

You have power.

No matter how much government corruption there is, no matter how severely large corporations influence legislation and donate huge sums of money to political campaigns, this country's government is by the people for the people. The United States of America belong to the people of this nation, and no one knows that better than the politicians who cheat and sneak and cut corners and perpetrate gerrymandering in order to win elections.

Every vote makes a difference.

Trauma-based mind control programs have been developed to brainwash the citizens of the U.S. into believing they have no power to vote a president into office who will be fair, honest, responsible, ethical, dependable, healthy, and take their duty of public service to heart, because there are not any such people to vote for on the ballot. There are TBMC programs designed to make U.S. citizens feel like powerless victims of an inevitable future tyrannical regime in which our constitutional rights are completely negated and our democracy is a farce to lie to the world about our government's dictatorship. What TBMC experts understand is that the majority of people have beliefs, convictions, and thinking patterns dominated by their feelings instead of led by cool logic and rational deduction.

The press is snowing people about the next election.

For example, a person's self-worth is usually based on how they feel, not how they think of themselves. If you feel bad about yourself, you are likely to believe you are worthless. If you feel good about yourself, you are likely to believe you are worth something.

Did someone say on national t.v. that unless you live in a swing state, your vote doesn't make any difference?

Similarly, if you feel like you are living in a world where there is a very difficult to change trajectory of political corruption that is destined to result in a future of an American communist dictatorship toppling our democracy, you will believe in the inevitability of this fate and wallow in despair, fear, worthlessness, disempowerment, and choose not to take action which you are convinced is futile. If you feel hopeful and good about how the next Democratic or Independent candidate for presidency is going to fix everything and reinstate the constitutional rights and fairness to our government's administration, you will believe that all you have to do is send in your mail-in ballot or show up at the polls on voting day and vote for him/her. With both of these tracks, the citizen is brainwashed into believing they either have no responsibility to civic activism to maintain or restore their constitutional rights, and that the president and his/her administration has all the power and the people have almost none.

The power is with the people.

The lie that a third party candidate steals votes away from the Democratic candidate running for office as president and therefore causes a dangerous risk of the incompetent-at-not-abusing-power Republican being elected or re-elected is TIRED TIRED SNOW, snow with pee on it, muddy snow, your snow is showing snow, everybody is going to someday realize that every person who spoke a word on national television in 2018 is a pedophile type snow.

Every person who has spoken a word on national television so far in 2019 is currently sick with pedophilia.

I have news for you people, President Donald Trump will absolutely not be re-elected because he does not want to serve a second term and the plan from the very beginning was to throw the re-election to the opposing candidate.

The presidential candidate who will serve this nation with love for all people is someone who will be elected for who they are inside instead of their gender or race.

Hasn't anyone noticed a pattern with the last four presidential elections in which the Democratic and Republican candidates represent themselves in a polarizing way to lower our standards and make us be grateful that at least the other person didn't get elected after a person takes office that we know deep down is totally unwilling to serve this nation with integrity?

Ever hear of the "good cop, bad cop" ploy used to promote a trust they plan abuse?

Don't you see how the people of this country are manipulated back and forth into complacency and fear of oppression by candidates for presidency and presidents who threaten and intimidate about abuses of power in the executive branch of the U.S. government so that at the end of the day we are just grateful it isn't worse? It is a pendulum of emotional manipulation swinging: the politician takes action to violate the constitutional rights of vulnerable groups of people in this country by institutionalizing economic oligarchy, racism, homophobia, sexism, or religious intolerance, then the opposing presidential candidate with a presentation of healthy values, open-mindedness, and grounded responsibility steps up to perform the rescue and we can all sit back and relax because he/she will fulfill their promise to fix everything for us.

Bad guy politician: Sit back down liberal, you don't have any power.

Good guy politician: Wait, cherished citizen, don't get up, I'll do it for you by beating him in election.

What would it take for you to clearly understand that the entire Democratic Party and the entire Republican Party are all on the same team, each player with different sponsors, competing against each other for how good they are at gaining popularity votes? What would it take to prove to you beyond a shadow of a doubt that Hillary Clinton planned to throw the 2016 presidential election to Donald Trump before she began her campaign? These politicians want very much for citizens to be manipulated into complacency that the newly elected president will fix everything, and they do this through trauma-based mind control with the press designed to emotionally manipulate you into believing their snow-jobs.

The press: whatever you do, understand your grassroots movement for a third-party candidate for presidency is destined to lose without our airtime so don't even think about trying!!! We smack down billionaire Independent candidates for presidency with corporate backing with the lie that they would be stealing votes away from the Democratic candidate who can actually defeat the bad guy Republican.

At what point did the standards of the people of this country sink so low that we repeatedly accept candidates for presidency that are the lesser of two evils and that this is going to have to be good enough because that is our only option? What do you, the resident of this country, own that is powerful? What do you have as much of as everyone else? Your attention. Your attention is incredibly valuable and the press wants it, the politicians want it, the trauma-based mind control experts want it, the salespeople want it, if you have children they want it, your body wants your attention, and your feelings want your attention. Your attention is precious and powerful. If you move your attention away from the mainstream press and look for sources of news that are not owned by large corporations, you have participated in a movement to reestablish the checks and balances that reverse abuses of power within our government.
